JUST CHILD'S PLAY.....

Small toys are better than big ones for therapeutic play. The child, having a world in miniature before it, quickly "builds up" this world from situations in the grown-up sized universe it lives in.

Also the small toys gives a child a sense of power and adequacy which is often lacking by very reason of the "bigness" of the grown up world.

JUST CHILD'S PLAY.....

Richard beat up the big black gollywog every time he came to the clinic. Only he - and the psychiatrist - realized that it was really father. It was healthy for him to get it "out of his system" in this harmless way.....

JUST CHILD'S PLAY.....

80

All small children like to play with water and sand - and it's a good chance for a "pretend" tea party. Joan pretends to be the naughty little girl who throws all her food on the floor. She's probably "playing out" the real situation in which she was the "bad girl".
